By Katherine L. Ackerman, Alison D. Nugent, and Chung Taing

We would like to express our sincere gratitude to our editor of Atmospheric Chemistry and Physics, Dr. Russell, for your remarkable swiftness and unwavering encouragement throughout the publication process of our research article. Additionally, we feel deeply honored to have been chosen as a Highlight Article of Atmospheric Chemistry and Physics. Your prompt responses, insightful feedback, and dedicated support have made this journey both smooth and inspiring. Your commitment to advancing the field and your dedication to nurturing the work of aspiring researchers like myself is truly commendable. We are deeply thankful for your invaluable contributions and look forward to continued collaboration with Atmospheric Chemistry and Physics in the future.
