

The detailed, point-by-point responses are all included in the response to reviewers.

I have prepared the data for archiving at the University of Washington ResearchWorks archive. It will take a few days to get the DOI, which can be inserted in the final version.

My reference software updates the references each time it regenerates the biography, cluttering the tracked changes. I have gone through and manually accepted all of these changes. I could have inadvertently accepted an actual change in the process (unlikely, and if so, it was likely a newly inserted ref).
