Figure S1: Standardized feature performance (mean squared error) from permutation analysis on Artificial Neural Networks used for gap filling latent heat (left) and sensible heat (right). Higher value implies greater error associated with randomizing the sequence of the input feature.