

Figure caption: Cations released from rock feedstock (cation alkalinity) is balanced by the sum of carbonate alkalinity, organic alkalinity and e.g. nitrate from fertilizer nitrification. Relative contributions are indicated by the thickness of the arrows. Most of the cations will be incorporated into the crop and clay minerals, which stabilize soil organic matter as a transient pool of MAOM (Mineral Associated Organic Matter).