

Review of: 'Occurrence of seeding multi-layer clouds in the Arctic from ground-based observations' by Achtert et al.

General comments

In their reply, the authors have provided clear and satisfactory answers to all of my questions and concerns and have addressed my comments submitted in the first review round. They have also adapted and updated the manuscript to include suggestions and corrections.

The significance of this work, the solid methodology and interesting findings have already been highlighted by both referees in the first round of reviews and remain unchanged. With this in mind and after the implementation of the suggested changes I would propose this manuscript to be published as is.
